Upon graduation from UW-Madison, Rick started a successful business designing and building outdoor spaces. Inspired by his wife Lauren, an RN, to contribute to the healthcare field, he then pursued a degree in chiropractic at Palmer College of Chiropractic. A designer at heart, Rick engineered a portable chiropractic table, and demand for his table grew quickly. In 1986 Rick and Lauren co-founded Thuli Tables, which designs and manufactures world-class treatment tables for healthcare professionals. Located in rural Dodgeville, Thuli Tables employs many talented craftspersons. Thuli tables are used all over the world, including by countless chiropractic clinics, professional sports teams, high-end spas, and the Olympics. Local philanthropic contributions include the Dodgeville School District, Community Connections Free Clinic, and Upland Hills Health.
